The Broom Brigade

Murphy's Markets would like to recognize the community efforts of The Broom Brigade, a group of community members that have been cleaning up the Eureka waterfront trail every Saturday.

"We have a core group of about ten to twelve people that come out every Saturday. We meet at the beginning of Tydd Street and go as far as we can," explains core member

Brandon Allday. "It really started as a way to keep our trails clean and beautiful, there is also a great physical element to the clean up. We see a big change on the trails week to week. It seems like people are really keeping it up a lot more since we started."

The Broom Brigade would like to invite the public to come out and ride, walk or skate every Saturday at 10:30 am. They would also like to thank all the businesses that support them, including Mantova's Two Street Music, Humboldt's Best Brand Beef Jerky and Murphy's Market. They would also like to remind the public that they are always accepting donations of any kind. For more information on The Broom Brigade, you can go to their Facebook page, Facebook.com/TheBroomBrigade.

Who amongst us shall be crowned? It is up to all who dwell in the County of Humboldt. The most humble subjects at North Coast Journal are taking votes for the best in the land. That is the question posed by NCJ's 2018 Best of Humboldt Readers Poll: Who treats you like royalty? Which people, places, and things shall be deemed the best?

Vote!

NORTHCOASTJOURNAL.COM/BOH2018

Here's how Best of Humboldt works:

ROUND II RULES: You can vote for as many or as few subcategories as you like, and you can vote every day from June 4 to June 30. (But just once a day!) Most of the categories have the top three nominees to choose from, but a few have ties. We need you to break those ties!

So how do we make sure there's no cheating or robo-voting? You'll have to make an account and confirm your email, but it's super quick and easy, we promise! This year's system has been redesigned to be easier to use than ever. All hail to the best!

Vote Madrone!

Editor:

Humboldt County's Fifth District has been my home since 1970. It is a place like no other. I am a professional artist so in addition to being my home, it has also been the source of my inspiration, having a plethora of world-class scenery.

To my way of thinking, nothing is more paramount than protecting and preserving the qualities that make Humboldt County such an ideal place to live. While a healthy economy is important, thoughtful, careful development is what we need to help preserve the qualities that make our county so desirable. Our fragile ecosystems cannot support reckless development for the sake of money.

Humboldt County stands at a crossroad. I support Steve Madrone because I think he has the values, wisdom and experience to guide us in a direction that will benefit all of us and our children and grandchildren.

Susan Morton, McKinleyville

Editor:

I have known and worked with Stephen Madrone for 45 years. I have witnessed his excellent work ethic, honesty and family values put into constant practice. He is an idea man who demonstrates the ability to put those ideas into motion and on the ground for the betterment of the people and land of Humboldt County.

The Hammond Trail would not have come to fruition without Mr. Madrone's ability to unite people and move projects. Countless times I have taken my triplet boys on the Hammond Trail ... a treasure! The Hammond Trail has inspired new trail projects across the county.

Steve Madrone is a proven job-creator whose work, projects and grant-writing skills have improved life in the Fifth District and in Humboldt County as a whole. He has the vision to recognize not only the present needs but also the future needs of the Fifth District. Vote for Madrone!

Vaughn Hutchins, Blue Lake

Editor:

I am writing to encourage my neighbors in the Fifth District to vote for Steve Madrone in the upcoming election. I came to Humboldt County in the 1970s to attend Humboldt State University and have now lived, worked and raised my three children here in the years since. My perspective is drawn from my long professional career in fisheries science, which has paralleled Steve's own.

Steve's record of success in bringing North Coast communities together with federal and state agencies to restore the bounty of our natural environment speaks loudly of his qualifications. He has been awarded for his leadership with top honors from organizations I have been actively involved with, including American Fisheries Society and Salmonid Restoration Federation.

We have seen what our current supervisor has and has not produced; I believe Steve is best qualified to lead efforts to improve lives in the Fifth District.

Robert Franklin, McKinleyville

Editor:

It was a lazy Saturday. And then the doorbell rang. Was it that door-to-door accordion saleswoman again? No. It was Steve Madrone himself, trying to convince me to vote for him for Fifth District supervisor. Steve says that mine was the 3,001st door that he'd knocked on since he started campaigning. For that kind of effort to talk to as many people in the district as possible (and a bunch of other reasons), he gets my vote.

J.A. Savage, Trinidad

Vote Sundberg!

Editor:

Please encourage your friends and neighbors to re-elect Ryan Sundberg for Fifth District supervisor.

Ryan is a self-made man of good character. As a Yurok Indian, he provides a voice for our native American neighbors who are so under-represented in the state and county it is embarrassing. His experience includes private and public employment, unlike his opponent SunGnome Madrone.

SunGnome has changed his name to Stephen for this election to appear less radical. He represents regressive policies of times past, including special interest spending over community needs, generous benefits to our transient population and increased burdens on job-creating employers. Madrone's policies will increase crime, despair and blight, forcing working families to relocate, replaced by more government employees and NGOs to keep his radical agenda alive and our county a place that your children will move away from.

Zach Rotwein, Trinidad

Editor:

When Ryan Sundberg was my auto insurance agent it did not matter what national party he belonged to, only that when I called him to say my car was broken down on Bella Vista Hill and traffic was so bad I could not even step out of my car, he got a tow truck there within 10 minutes. Since he was elected to the (non-partisan) county Board of Supervisors, I have had to call upon him on several occasions and he has always tried to help me with my problems.

I don't care what political party he is in. Most people join the party their parents belong to. I do care if the public official I am speaking to listens to me, seems to care and attempts to help me. That is why I am going to vote for Ryan Sundberg. And this year I will register as a Bull Moose. Party partisanship has divided America and will make us easy pickings for enemies abroad.

Bill Quinn, Trinidad

Editor:

Ryan Sundberg has my enthusiastic support as Fifth District supervisor! He has jumped into this job with both feet — listened to advice, acted on complaints and has supported the Fifth District wholeheartedly!

He supports children's safety in schools and has been very proactive and effective in his inquiries, support of our community, the educators and our children. He has been in office long enough to have learned how he can be the most effective. Re-electing him now will give our community

Vote Lyons!

Editor:

I just wanted to voice my support for Mary Ann Lyons for Humboldt County Fourth District supervisor. She is passionate, educated and caring. She has helped me in times of need and has been generous even when it has not been asked of her. Mary Ann is enthusiastic and energetic. I know she can use these attributes to make positive change in our district. I trust Mary Ann Lyons and I hope she gets the opportunity to continue contributing to our unique community as an elected public servant. Thanks for your time.

Heather Maddox, Eureka

Editor:

Virginia Bass won elections promising us jobs and a general plan for developers. She managed the plan change but failed in creating jobs.

The county faces a bleak future; we need new blood. Our youth leave to find good employment. The notion that cannabis and retirees can somehow revive the economy is pie in the sky thinking. Our medical services are crumbling. The crime rate keeps growing despite Measure Z passed to fix it. Developers want to create homes that residents cannot afford, homelessness grows. We need fresh thinking.

The agent for change is Mary Ann Lyons. Her depth of experience is a mixture of practical and theoretical. She has been a union member, leader and a teacher. She understands that Humboldt has the talent and skills to create a new type of economy friendlier to working people. She is the spirit of the future; what we need to grow.

Timothy J. McDermond, Arcata

Scout's Honor?

Editor:

When Steve Madrone first announced his candidacy for the Fifth District, his listed accomplishments stated he had been a "candidate" for Eagle Scout. Red flag for me. Later it was clarified he was an Eagle Scout.

The Orange County Council of the Boy Scouts of America informed me they don't keep records locally dating back to the 1960s and referred me to the national office in Texas [(972) 580-2489]. I spoke with Texas twice last week and they show

I spoke to Mr. Madrone Sunday, he felt this was odd and said he would have to look into it. He also couldn't remember his troop number (another red flag).

An Ongoing Dialogue

Few answers, much frustration, as pending lawsuits stymie public disclosure on Lawson investigation

By Linda Stansberry

linda@northcoastjournal.com

With several attendees expressing frustration over a lack of concrete steps coming out of previous events, the May 24 Community Dialogue on Race at the D Street Neighborhood Center was marked by a barrage of questions directed at the two city officials present: City Manager Karen Diemer and City Councilmember Paul Pitino. The questions largely revolved around the investigation into the death of Humboldt State University student David Josiah "DJ" Lawson, who was stabbed at an off-campus house party on April 17, 2017. Few of the questions were answered.

The meeting, facilitated by community organizer Renee Saucedo, began with introductions, an agreement to ground rules and with each participant asked what they would like to see as a result of the meeting. Around 50 people sat in a circle, addressing the question. Many students said they would like the killing solved. Several parents said they were concerned for their children's safety. Community members called for an exploration of institutional racism.

"I'm here to stand with students of color and to add my voice to the conversation," said Sharrone Blancke, interim president of the local NAACP chapter.

Charmaine Lawson, Josiah Lawson's mother, could not attend in person due to a family graduation but a friend livestreamed the event for her, adding her own questions. According to a press release sent prior to the event, the family's priority for the dialogue was to work on bringing back "retired FBI investigator Tom Parker to lead the investigation of Josiah Lawson's murder, rather than relying on the city of Arcata's limited skill." Parker left the investigation in April, saying he believed the police department was withholding information and failing to follow his recommendations. Then Police Chief Tom Chapman resigned fewer than 24 hours after Parker stepped away.

Saucedo tallied the responses and narrowed in on the investigation as the primary topic for discussion. City officials were tapped to respond to questions from audience members.

Pitino, responding to the question of whether the city would rehire Parker, said that he had been instructed by legal counsel not to comment, causing several people to audibly scoff. Diemer explained that there were some things that could not be discussed publicly, as the city had been named in litigation brought by both the Lawson family and by Kyle Zoellner, the original suspect in the case.

Diemer said outside counsel had reviewed the pending lawsuits and, concluding that Parker would almost certainly be a witness at trial, found the idea of him returning to the investigation legally problematic. The investigation is currently being conducted by a team that includes two Arcata Police Department officers and two investigators from the Humboldt County District Attorney's Office. Diemer added she is currently searching for an additional investigator and welcomes suggestions.

absence of HSU President Lisa Rossbacher, who had attended a previous meeting and was reportedly invited to subsequent sessions.

In a phone interview after the dialogue, Charmaine Lawson said she would like Rossbacher to attend “just to be supportive.”

“Be supportive to a young man that was a student at that university before he was murdered right down the street,” Lawson said. “Be supportive for the students of color, be supportive of the community. This is something she should just show up, let the community know, ‘I’m here to advocate for the student.’ ... That’s what I would like for her to do, that’s what the community would like for her to do, that’s what DJ would like her to do.”

In response to a Journal email, HSU spokesperson Aileen Yoo sent the following statement: “The president, vice president, police chief and other university officials have attended many events and activities related to creating a more diverse and equitable community. They will continue to do so because this is valuable engagement for HSU and the community.”

At the meeting, a community member asked the council to put the issue of racism on its agenda, to form a committee to explore the issue and to collaborate with HSU on addressing racism toward students and people of color in the larger community. The community member also suggested a police oversight committee, which Pitino said was only possible if the governmental structure of Arcata was changed to that of a charter city, although a police advisory board is certainly an option.

Diemer added the city has been working on a program with the university to promote racial equity. Giancarlo Campagna, Saucedo’s husband, accused Diemer and the council of protecting the interests of white “settler families” rather than people of color.

“I think it would behoove you to make sure the case goes away,” he said. “It’s a continuation of white violence on brown bodies.”

Campagna said Diemer needed to “stand up to the white families.”

“I don’t know if you’re even capable of standing up for what’s right,” he said.

Pitino took umbrage at the accusation, saying he doesn’t “bend over for any white settlers.”

Before Saucedo asked the media and public officials to leave so the remaining attendees could discuss action steps, Diemer agreed to work with Charmaine Lawson and others to bolster the investigative team, saying the city was openly recruiting California law enforcement professionals with experience in homicide investigations to help with the case. Saucedo said she could not say whether there would be a report on the rest of the evening’s discussion, although some of it was included in the group’s Facebook Live video. That discussion included pressuring the university and the district attorney’s office to bring Parker back to the investigation and asking the Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury to investigate the city.

The Journal requested a report from the remainder of the meeting but had not received one as of press time. Although the meeting was originally announced by the city as part of its series of Community Dialogues on Race, noticed on the city’s website and held on city property, Diemer said after the meeting that several factors have impacted the city’s ability to formally participate in and host the meetings.

“In the past, the city hosted meetings at the request of the group to facilitate an additional dialogue on race,” Diemer said. “But the city can’t host meetings that discuss an ongoing investigation.”

Diemer explained that prior to May 24, the dialogues were classified as study sessions of the city council, which fall under open government laws of public meetings. Those laws require a majority of the city council to be present and for the entire meeting to be public.

“That structure has been challenging for the type of dialogue that this group has been attempting to engage in,” Diemer told the Journal. “The city can’t participate in meetings that aren’t open to the public.”

She said that the city will be “regrouping” and that Arcata has committed to supporting Equity Arcata, a local group made up of city leaders, HSU staff, business owners and community members exploring initiatives related to diversity and inclusion.

Thousands descended on the Arcata Plaza on Saturday, May 26, to see the blend of art, engineering and pedal-powered madness that is the parade of the Kinetic Grand Championship teams and their wild rides. Around midday, after a kind of show and shine with spectators, the machines took off down Eighth Street, beginning their three-day, 40-plus mile trek over pavement, sand, mud and water to the finish line on Ferndale's Main Street, where Team Trilobike took home the glorious distinction of 2018 Kinetic Grand Champions. Photographers Mark McKenna and Sam Armanino were there to capture the action and shared their photos. # National Morphine Shortage Hits Local Hospitals

Local healthcare providers have been struggling to supply patients with injectable morphine, according to representatives from St. Joseph, Mad River and Jerold Phelps hospitals.

"This is a very multi-faceted topic, not limited to opiates alone," Terry Lerma, director of pharmacy services at St. Joseph Hospital, told the Journal. "Most of the nation has been grappling with a series of critical medications shortages for two years."

National news coverage of the issue cites an unfortunate confluence of factors, including natural disasters that have slowed manufacture of some products and stronger restrictions on opiate production in response to a nationwide addiction crisis. Lerma said that all of these factors, as well as a shortage of the raw materials necessary to create the medication — specifically raw opium produced in Afghanistan and Pakistan — have impacted hospital pharmacies.

"Hurricanes and flooding, other natural disasters, have wiped out major pharmaceutical manufacturers," Lerma said, referring to September's Hurricane Maria, which according to an article in The

Guardian, wiped out a large IV fluid manufacturer in Puerto Rico.

As a result, Lerma said his team has had to become more "nimble" in how they respond to patients' needs. The Journal was tipped off to the shortage by the loved one of a hospice patient who was receiving palliative pain care through the administration of oral morphine, with drops placed under the tongue rather than through an IV drip.

"We communicate daily with service providers," Lerma said, explaining that, depending on what is available, what is prescribed may vary from patient to patient and day to day. "We knock on every door. Maybe we have a surplus of hydromorphone, and we may have to shift prescribing toward Fentanyl."

Tina Wood, critical care manager at Mad River Community Hospital, said the shortage has affected emergency medical services, specifically the two ground ambulances for which the hospital is a base station.

"If we have no morphine, we have none to supply our EMS partners and they have none for those patients who truly need some analgesia related to traumatic injury or severe medical conditions," Wood ex-

Shrouded

Those who arrived at the Arcata Plaza on Saturday to watch the Kinetic Grand Championship kick off were greeted by an unusual dual act of protest. Someone had draped the McKinley statue at the plaza's center — which the city council has voted to remove — in a white sheet painted with the words "Justice for Josiah" in red paint, a nod to the still unsolved April 15, 2017 homicide of David Josiah Lawson. It's unclear who shrouded the statue but no efforts were being made to remove it as the race kicked off.

plained to the Journal via email. "Some of our folks that come in by ambulance have a more than 90 minute ride to get to our facility. That is a long time to be bouncing along and in pain."

Wood said that after decades of medical facilities being accused of undertreating pain, the crisis has come full circle:

"We have caused addiction by over-treating pain. We have the crisis in the face of nationwide shortages of analgesic medications. ... The irony is not lost on myself or my staff." ●

Toke the Vote!

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

When Californians head to the polls Tuesday the cannabis industry won't be on the ballot but it has a lot at stake. Most notably, the state's next governor will oversee the implementation of new regulations slated to be rolled out later this year to govern what's expected to become a $5 billion recreational industry by 2020. And the candidates offer some stark contrasts in approach and outlook to America's second-favorite psychoactive substance.

Earlier this year, the state's top six candidates for the post gathered for the Univision debate and moderator Jorge Ramos asked for a show of hands for who among them had "ever used pot?" Former Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa shot his hand up with no small air of pride, adding, "And unlike some, I inhaled." State Treasurer John Chiang seemed to reluctantly follow suit. Former state Superintendent of Public Instruction Delaine Eastin's hand was last to go up.

The other three candidates on stage — Democrat Lt. Gov. Gavin Newsom and Republicans John Cox, a businessman, and Assemblyman Travis Allen — maintained they've never touched the stuff. But even among the two camps, there's some interesting nuances between the candidates' takes on California's new industry. Here's a quick rundown of where they stand, just in case you want to take it into account Tuesday.

Allen — The 44-year-old financial planner was one of two assembly members to vote against Senate Bill 94, California's landmark legislation to license and regulate the medical cannabis industry, last year. He's spoken out against recreational legalization, saying at a debate earlier this month that it will have "disasterous consequences in California, as we have already seen in Colorado."

Chiang — The 55-year-old treasurer has been at the forefront of California's new regulated cannabis economy, most notably convening a working group last year that came up with the landmark recommendation that the state should look into creating a state bank to help the cannabis industry transition into banking and financing and away from its currently fraught cash-only transactions.

Cox — The 62-year-old millionaire snack foods mogul from Rancho Santa Fe has been by far the most outspoken critic of cannabis. Last month, he told the San Diego Union-Tribune that the Golden State should implement a system similar to one in Portugal, where drug possession charges can lead to mandatory in-patient medical treatment. "I'd like to go to the Portugal system where they actually put people who use marijuana in hospitals and cure them of their substance abuse," he told the paper. (He clarified in a follow-up interview that he didn't mean users should be institutionalized, just treated.)

Eastin — The 77 year old has long supported decriminalization and has come out in favor of California forming a public bank for the cannabis industry. While critical of prohibition — "That hasn't worked so well," she told the Ukiah Daily Journal — she's also no huge fan of Proposition 64, which she says could have been written "more strongly" with increased taxes earmarked to put additional funds into mental health treatment programs.

Newsom — The 50-year-old lieutenant governor famously told the Sacramento Bee of cannabis that he "hates the stuff. Can't stand it." But he also helmed the state's Blue Ribbon Commission on Marijuana Policy, championed Proposition 64 and last year took in more than $300,000 in campaign contributions from the cannabis industry. While some have criticized his support of cannabis legalization as purely for political purposes, he has maintained he sees it as a social justice issue, no matter his personal views on the plant.

Villaraigosa — The 65 year old who served two terms as mayor of California's largest city was late to support Proposition 64, ultimately only endorsing it a week before Election Day. He's generally seen as pro-cannabis legalization and supportive of the industry, including a number of statements about the need to protect small farms in the face of money-eyed corporations. But he has also been outspoken about the need to develop a test to crack down on stoned driving.

So there's the quick rundown. But please remember there's a lot more to running California — the world's fifth largest economy — than one's approach to cannabis. Do your homework and make sure to vote June 5.

A Caregiver's Final Act

A domino effect of domestic violence claims a beloved community member

By Thadeus Greenson and Kimberly Wear

newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

It's just five days after 60-year-old Sharral "Sherry" McDonald was shot in a quiet Eureka neighborhood in a mother-in-law unit tucked between H and G streets. Her husband and two daughters are sitting in the North Coast Journal office, trying through their grief to convey who she was.

She was a caregiver, they say, both officially as an in-home supportive services aide and unofficially as the primary provider for an aunt with dementia. Phil McDonald, 54, who'd been married to Sherry for more than two decades, says she'd be "dirt tired" some nights but if one of her charges called needing something — even just a candy bar and a 7-UP — she'd hop in the car and head to the store, then drive out to Hydesville or wherever. Sometimes, he says, if someone called hungry she'd just clean out the home refrigerator, put the food in a box and drive it over.

She worked late nights cleaning a couple of Fortuna laundromats after they closed. When it was cold, she'd invite the neighborhood homeless people inside to keep warm while she cleaned. Often, they say, when heading to work she'd stop to pick up food for them and a bag of chow for their dogs.

"She just genuinely cared about people," her 23-year-old daughter Shelsey McDonald says, adding that whatever you had to do, her mother would volunteer to help, no matter how much she had going in her own life. "She was just that person."

Shayla Verbich, 40, jokes that whenever she had her mom over for a barbecue she knew she had to make extra food and have plenty of Tupperware on hand because Sherry would pack up whatever was left over and take it to seniors in the neighborhood.

Sherry lived for her five grandkids and would spend as much time as she could with them, whether babysitting or coming over for all-night movie binges, even though she didn't care much for television or movies. She loved wolves, Verbich says, which makes sense because she was the family's "protector," constantly making sure everyone had what they needed.

Verbich pauses and looks out a window down onto Eureka's F Street, searching for the words. She says she has a vivid memory from when she was little, just 7 or 8, and she and her mom went to the Fortuna Rodeo, which was prone to get a bit rowdy in those days, with people tailgating and drinking all day. She recalls she and her mom were walking up to the grounds when they saw a crowd of people watching a fight. A group of "girls" in their late teens or early 20s were beating up another young woman.

"She didn't even hesitate — and she didn't know this woman from Adam. She stepped in, picked the girl up and took us out of there," Verbich recalls, adding that she and her mom later took the girl home to her parents. "She just wasn't going to stand around while someone was being hurt. She told me later, 'You don't watch someone hurt someone else. That's not OK.'"

With all that in mind, they say what Sherry McDonald did on May 6, when she put herself between a dear friend and a felon with a gun, does not surprise them, even though it came with fatal consequences. Police report that Ronald Allen Crossland, a 52 year old with a long rap sheet who'd been released from jail just a few weeks earlier, showed up at that H Street home armed with a small caliber pistol and tried to kidnap Jane Doe, his on-again, off-again girlfriend. Sherry McDonald put herself in front of Jane Doe and Crossland shot her once in the head. She died before police arrived on scene. Jane Doe was uninjured.

"She would protect anyone from harm," Verbich says. "I know my mom didn't even put a second of doubt in her mind because that's what she would do for anyone."

Jane Doe, a 42-year-old nurse at St. Joseph Hospital, started dating Crossland in September, according to court records, though the circumstances of their courtship aren't clear. (It is the North Coast Journal's policy not to identify victims of domestic violence and multiple phone messages for Jane Doe went unreturned.)

What is clear is that things quickly soured in their relationship and Crossland was arrested Dec. 26 after Jane Doe alleged he'd shown up at her work, thrown her to the ground, pulled her hair and punched her with a closed fist before taking her car. But this wasn't the first alleged instance of violence in their relationship, according to a domestic violence restraining order application Jane Doe filed with the court Jan 9.

The first such instance occurred in early December, according to court records, when Crossland had been drinking all day. Jane Doe alleges that Crossland was upset about a "truck deal that had fallen through" and demanded that she take him to a friend's house. When she told him she was tired, he allegedly headbutted her, demanded her keys and ordered her into the car. When Jane Doe slumped in her seat on the drive, Crossland allegedly called her a racial slur and pulled her up by her hair. After stopping at his friend's house, Crossland told Jane Doe, "You're driving, bitch," and ordered her into the driver's seat.

"I move to the driver's seat and drive us towards home," Jane Doe wrote in the restraining order paperwork. "Ronald then punched me on the right side of the face. I instantly braked and pulled over to the side of the road. I get out of the car and attempt to run but I fall on my knee and my nose is bleeding. Ronald gets out and yells, ‘Get back in the car, bitch!’ Neighbors come out because of the commotion. I told Ronald to ‘just leave.’ Ronald gets back in the car and leaves. I deny the neighbors’ assistance because I don’t want to involve them. I walk the last few miles home.”

The next instance came Christmas Day, when Jane Doe showed up at Crossland’s home after not having seen him for a couple of days. Crossland answered the door drunk, Jane Doe writes in the application, and started crying, asking where she’d been and if she’d been with another man. His demeanor then switched to anger, Jane Doe writes, and he demanded the keys to her car and left. A couple of hours later, Crossland returned and ordered Jane Doe into the car. She writes that they drove around for “several hours” and that Crossland slapped her several times and “yanked her hair a few times, as well” as they drove around, eventually arriving in Kneeland, where Crossland “said he was going to bury (Jane Doe) at one of the ranches.”

At one point, Crossland stopped at a ranch, got out of the car and spoke to an unidentified man for a while. When he got back in, he allegedly “backhanded” Jane Doe on the side of the face and chastised her for leaving him alone on Christmas Eve. Crossland then allegedly drove the pair back to Eureka, where he stopped at a liquor store.

“I get out of the car when he is inside and try to run away,” Jane Doe writes. “Ronald comes out, catches me, pulls me across the street by the hair, yelling profanity. ‘Get in the car, bitch,’ and I do. He goes back inside the liquor store to buy his alcohol. Ronald drives us back to his place and drinks himself to sleep. Barefoot, I gather my belongings and tiptoe out of his house. I get in my car and leave.”

Things allegedly continued the following day when Jane Doe arrived at work to find Crossland waiting for her. “Oh, you think you will get away from me?” he allegedly asks before again demanding her keys, Jane Doe writes, adding that he smelled of alcohol. “Give me the keys now or you will see what transpires.”

Jane Doe writes that she tried to calm Crossland down but he punched her with a closed fist, leaving her “disoriented and dizzy.” He took her keys and drove away, after which Jane Doe walked into the nursing department and told a co-worker what happened and the co-worker contacted her supervisors. “I was scared of calling the cops myself but was also afraid for my life,” Jane Doe writes, adding that a supervisor called the police.

Eureka police officers arrived some time later and found Crossland in the parking lot in Jane Doe’s car. They arrested him without incident, according to court records. During an interview with police he initially conceded that he had argued with Jane Doe but “denied any physical altercation.” Later, while being transported to the jail, Crossland “made the spontaneous statement, ‘We got into an argument and I grabbed her hair and pushed her but I did not slap her,’” according to court records.

Two days later, on Dec. 28, the Humboldt County District Attorney’s Office charged Crossland with carjacking, robbery and misdemeanor domestic battery. If convicted of the charges, he would have faced more than 10 years in state prison.

Jane Doe’s restraining order application ends with a chilling warning: “Ronald is a violent man with a very violent history ... I don’t feel safe having any contact of any sort with him. He has repeatedly threatened my life and stated that he fears no law or person.”

On Jan. 31, Jane Doe was scheduled to appear in court for a hearing on her restraining order application. She didn’t show up and the order was dismissed.

A couple of weeks earlier, Jane Doe had met with members of the district attorney’s domestic violence unit after their repeated attempts to contact her. According to District Attorney Maggie Fleming, she told an investigator and prosecutor that the charges

Crossland was facing were “too harsh” in relation to his behavior. Based on Jane Doe’s “express wishes and the fact we had no other way to prove the case except her testimony,” prosecutors agreed to a deal: Crossland would plead guilty to taking a vehicle without its owner’s consent — a felony — and misdemeanor domestic battery, leaving him facing about three years in county jail, according to Fleming. (While the sentence for the felony would historically have been spent in prison, the state’s realignment bill Assembly Bill 109 shifted that to a county jail term.)

So on Feb. 21, just as Jane Doe was to be called to the stand to testify in a hearing to determine if there was enough evidence to hold Crossland to stand trial in the case, Crossland agreed to the deal. A few weeks later, on March 13, Crossland sat down with a probation officer for a pre-sentencing interview that would become part of a report in which the probation department would make a sentencing recommendation to a superior court judge.

In the interview, Crossland reportedly admitted that he “fucked up,” but said he “did not put hands on” Jane Doe. Crossland also told the probation officer that he had been working for Will Adams Construction for the “last few years” and that the company “had already returned to work for the season and he is hoping to be released early enough so he can go back to work.”

The pre-sentencing report states that Crossland was born in San Pablo and his parents divorced when he was young. He was largely raised in Humboldt County by his mother and his stepfather, who both died by his 20th birthday. Crossland dropped out of school before finishing 10th grade, according to the report, began smoking weed at the age of 12, and started drinking and using methamphetamine when he was 16.

Crossland’s first conviction came for drug possession in 1992 but it was quickly followed by others for assault with a deadly weapon, possession, tampering with a vehicle, assault and battery, vandalism, theft and more. In all, Crossland’s record contains 21 convictions, including four felonies and four stints in state prison, according to the report. But it’s worth noting the report only includes convictions, not the 36 times he was contacted by Fortuna police officers since January of 2013 or the 14 times he was arrested by the agency over the same span.

The report notes that probation’s Static Risk Assessment, an evidence-based tool for determining a defendant’s likelihood of re-offending, found Crossland’s risk level to be “high,” noting past failures in probation and parole programs.

In its ultimate recommendation to the court, the probation department seems to rely heavily on Crossland’s indication that he may have a job waiting for him if released.

“Given defendant’s employment it will be recommended he serve an eight-month term, with the balance on mandatory supervision, so he can return to his employment,” the report states.

The trouble is Crossland didn’t have a job waiting for him. Will Adams told the Journal that his company’s records show that Crossland hadn’t worked there since 2011 and that he had no knowledge of a job offer made earlier this year.

Humboldt County Interim Chief Probation Officer Shaun Brenneman declined to discuss the details of Crossland’s case with the Journal but said generally that pre-sentencing investigations are based on the defendant’s statements but the probation officer “will verify portions of the statements when they feel it is relevant to the sentencing recommendation.” Crossland’s report makes no mention of any attempts to verify his employment claims.

Still speaking generally, Brenneman indicated there’s a balancing act when sentencing people under the state’s realignment law, noting that defendants will re-enter the local community after their sentences are complete, so “it is generally better to have them under supervision with a search clause and access to services then let out with nothing in place.”

Humboldt County Superior Court Judge Dale Reinholtsen ultimately took the probation department’s recommendation and sentenced Crossland to eight months in jail and 28 months of community supervision.

With credit for time served and good conduct, Crossland was released from the county jail April 15. It’s unclear if he had any contact with the probation department between then and when he showed up at Jane Doe’s home with a pistol 21 days later.

Regina Millot, who lives across the dirt alley that splits the block between H and G streets from Jane Doe, says she came home the afternoon of May 4 to find Crossland “camped out” on Jane Doe’s porch with a box of stuff. He struck up a conversation with her, introducing himself and saying his friend lived in the small home.

Millot says she didn’t know Jane Doe well at the time, having only talked to her briefly as she and Sherry McDonald moved some things in about six weeks earlier. But she says she had a bad feeling about the situation with Crossland on her porch and kept an eye out for signs of trouble, having remembered Crossland from years earlier, when he dated her sister back in junior high.

“I know he always seemed like a troubled soul to me,” she says.

Another neighbor says she was taking out some green waste at about 4 p.m. on May 6 when she saw Jane Doe and McDonald pull up in Doe’s black Honda Accord. Both women were laughing and in good spirits, she says.

At about 5 p.m. Millot says she heard a popping sound followed by screams and looked out her window in time to see Jane Doe run out the door, across the alley and toward her driveway. She stepped onto her porch to ask if everything was OK.

“She was saying, ‘Help me, help me, he just shot my friend,’” Millot says.

Jane Doe was on the phone with police with Crossland chasing behind her when Millot says he looked up and said, “Don’t listen to her." She says she could clearly see his hand on a gun in his pant pocket.

"I think if I didn't come out, he probably would have shot her, too," Millot says.

Crossland then took off and drove away in Jane Doe's Honda. In the time between the shooting and when the vehicle was found abandoned on Fern Street near Redwood Fields, Eureka police received at least two reports of a man driving a black Honda and brandishing a handgun.

"It was scary," Millot says. "I was really, really nervous."

While waiting for officers to arrive, Millot's son Kyle went with Jane Doe to check on McDonald. Millot says she could hear Jane Doe pleading, "Sherry wake up. Sherry wake up. Sherry," from across the street. Kyle came back almost immediately, saying there was no hope. McDonald had suffered a gunshot to the head.

It's still unclear how Crossland got from where he dumped Jane Doe's car in Cutten to Fortuna. But about four hours later, as Fortuna police officers approached a dilapidated trailer in a rundown park off Fortuna Boulevard, where about 50 trailers sit cheek-to-jowl amid rusty cars and debris piles, they heard a single gunshot. Inside a trailer they knew to be associated with Crossland, they found him dead from a single self-inflicted gunshot wound to the mouth.

Having spent 33 years in local law enforcement, Humboldt County District Attorney investigator Lynn Soderberg knows both the dangers and prevalence of domestic violence better than most.

Sure, it's easy to look at the Crossland case or so many others — Humboldt County averages about 50 percent more domestic violence-related police calls for service per capita than the state average, with more than 40 percent involving some kind of weapon — and ask why the victim didn't just leave or cooperate with authorities. But that's missing the point and unproductive, according to Soderberg.

"A lot of people say, 'Why doesn't the victim leave?'" she says, "and I say, 'Why doesn't the batterer stop beating? The accountability is on the batterer. Always.'"

North Coast Rape Crisis Center Community Coordinator Paula Arrowsmith-Jones says it's important for the community to understand that abusers are often very adept at "zeroing in on the vulnerabilities" of the person they are harming and using specific tactics to control them and keep them in the relationship.

"The person who's in it knows what they can or can't do and it gets very complicated," she says, noting that many people have children together, mixed finances or overlapping social circles. "Lives get entangled."

And because domestic violence is about power and control, batterers also become more abusive if they feel their control over their victims slipping.

"It's also very dangerous for victims to leave," Soderberg says. "That's one of the most dangerous times for a victim because that's when the power and control is being lost. And someone participating (in a prosecution) is akin to leaving."

Humboldt County's high domestic violence rates are not only troubling but represent a real challenge for law enforcement.

First and foremost, Soderberg said there's the fact that domestic violence is often a private crime that generally occurs behind closed doors. Then there's the fact that victims often feel they put a lot at risk by cooperating with prosecutions, including their own physical safety.

Soderberg and Arrowsmith-Jones say the community can help by supporting those around them without judgment and by stepping forward when they see something happening.

"We're in a community where a lot of people don't want to get involved," Soderberg says. "But we need witnesses willing to step forward and report what they see."

But Soderberg adds that law enforcement can get better at handling these types of calls, pointing to a recent training she put on for first responders asking them to do more — to get more corroborating witness statements and collect physical evidence — "so we're not putting the case to be prosecuted solely on the word of the victim when the victim may not feel free to cooperate."

"We do all that all the time with homicide cases," she says. "We've never put a homicide victim on the stand."

In Jane Doe's case, it appears EPD never took steps to interview her co-workers, who could have offered corroborating statements about what they saw after the alleged attack in the parking lot. And while Fleming says a district attorney investigator and prosecutor asked her questions designed to explore the “full history of actions and behaviors of the accused” and Jane Doe “did not mention to our people any prior incidents of physical domestic violence,” it seems they never followed up to pull her restraining order application, which was signed under penalty of perjury.

On May 18, the Fortuna Fire Hall was filled to capacity with the friends and family of Sherry McDonald, who gathered to share stories, to cry and laugh over paper plates filled with food from a potluck buffet of offerings. Music hummed softly under the din of conversation as a photo slideshow played on a projector against the back wall. There was a shot from her and Phil’s wedding day, with Sherry’s smile broad and her blond hair long and curly, and others through a smattering of family events, Sherry almost always with a child or grandkid in her lap. Hundreds of people stopped in to pay their respects.

A week earlier, back in the Journal office, Sherry’s daughter talked about a life well-lived. Sherry McDonald was born in San Diego but her family moved to Humboldt when she was little to return to its roots. Swain’s Flat out on State Route 36, they say, was named after her grandfather, who owned a mill, a restaurant and a store there. Sherry grew up in Bridgeville, went to grammar school in Hydesville and high school in Fortuna. She went on to work for more than two decades at Bayleysuit, a wet-suit manufacturer, and traveled around the world helping the company set up new stores.

But mostly Sherry’s life was about family and connecting with people, they say. They laugh, describing how it was a family rule not to send her out for any last-minute needs before dinner because she was likely not to return for an hour or more, having gotten caught up talking with an old friend or having met a new one. They talk about how she loved her dog Sammy and to read — mystery books especially — how she’d bring books down to Campton Heights Market to pass on to the clerk’s mom when she was done with them.

Verbich recalls her mom’s competitive streak and how she played softball well into her 50s and refused to stop sliding into bases or diving for balls, admonishing her daughters to stop “embarrassing me” when they urged caution. Phil McDonald talks about how sometimes his wife would just pull into a McDonald’s drive-through without saying a word, order a bag full of burgers and hand it to the homeless people sitting on the curb out front.

The conversation turns to Jane Doe and they note that she lived at Sherry’s home for a month or so while getting back on her feet before moving into the place off H Street. Verbich says she talked to her about domestic violence restraining orders, victim witness services and the importance of “pressing charges.”

“I know my mom wouldn’t want me to be bitter,” she says. “But this domino effect has impacted so many lives — all our lives — and it could have been prevented. But if my mom were here she wouldn’t want anyone to be hurtful or negative.”

“She never had a bad thing to say about anyone,” Shelsey McDonald adds. “My mom believed in forgiveness. She believed there was good in everyone.” ●

Reflections on Black Bear

Fifty years later, a new book captures life on the commune

By Malcolm Terence

I never would have written a book like this 50 years ago when we first started the Black Bear commune. We knew we had to keep secrets then. People mostly had only first names and even if we knew their last name it might have been invented. Maybe they were avoiding the military draft. Maybe they were just being careful. The sheriff would send in snitches to spy. The FBI would come by regularly looking for underground fugitives. The local police followed me in the first time I arrived there in the summer of 1968 and arrested me, mostly for possession of hair. It's a longer story, and it's Chapter 2 of the book. The chapter title is "The Recipe for Chimichangas, or How I Saved the Commune," and you can find it linked in the online version of this story. Clearly I was framed. Half the other guys in Yreka Jail told me they also were framed, so I fit right in.

About a year earlier, I'd left the world of news reporting to live with this big crowd of hippies. Some might call them "crazy hippies," but I reserve judgement. I was still a young man from a newspaper family so I'd been writing for papers since I was in my early teens. It was small papers and then big, even the biggest — the Los Angeles Times. But somehow it seemed that the world was changing faster than the world of news. South Central Los Angeles exploded in the Watts Riots on Aug. 11, 1965. My beat was the West Side, far from the unrest in South Central. "Unrest" understates it. Thirty-four people died, most killed by police and National Guard. More than 1,000 were injured. I watched hundreds of families escape from the war zone to Santa Monica beach, where they set up camp. It was safer than home.

Malcolm Terence.
Submitted

When things settled down, I told my editors about the camps that had blossomed and asked them why they thought the big populations of black people on the West Side had not joined the melee. They just shrugged. I offered to write a piece about why the West Side black neighborhoods — we called them ghettos — had stayed peaceful and they said to forget about it. News coverage has come a long way since those days.

Not too long after that I decided that my newspaper work was making me miss what was going on in the world so I left it behind. Before long some musician friends invited me to be their business manager and I couldn't resist. Their background was avant-garde and multicultural and their politics were revolutionary — a perfect mix for rock and roll. The band leader was Joseph Byrd, the same guy who later became a highly regarded music prof at College of the Redwoods. Record companies guessed that they could make money with us so we quickly had recording contracts and bookings across the country. Who knew there was a market for revolutionary culture? But a year-plus of that and it became a grind. There was continuous friction between the musicians, who were each very talented.

One week we played San Francisco and I met the Diggers. They were a theatrical gang who didn't just talk about changing society, they lived it, and they immediately won the attention of the national media. And my attention, too. I'd wearied of all-night recording sessions and back-to-back bookings, always on the threshold of imaginary fame and wealth, but never quite there. Before long I was in the mountains of Northern California at this commune just as it was getting started. It was a different world than anything I'd ever known or imagined. So I bailed on music much like I had on newspapering. You're not very patient in your mid-20s. That's where my book Beginner's Luck, Dispatches from the Klamath Mountains begins its tales.

Remember that the world was spinning like a brightly colored top in the 1960s and no one knew where it would land. People were organizing around issues of race and gender and against the war in Asia. A few years earlier, 1964, Lyndon Johnson, a Democrat, had run for the presidency against Barry Goldwater, and one of his campaign slogans was that a vote for Goldwater was a vote for a land war in Asia. Johnson won, but four years later our country was waist deep in a war in Vietnam. In other words, the world was going crazy, America was divided and it occurred to many young people that they needed to resist the corrupt insanity.

Sound familiar? Update the names of the presidents and move the land wars over a little way on the globe. It is some comfort that young people today are getting organized and standing up, just as we did 50 years ago.

I can't say that living at Black Bear commune with 60 other hippies was easy, but it was never boring. There were lots of communes in those days, some urban and others rural. Black Bear may have been the most remote. It is still there today but there has been much turnover in the years since I lived there. People would stay a few years, or a few days, to learn what they needed to learn. Most returned to cities but a few of us, me included, left the commune and stayed in the small river towns nearby. Some of the river locals were friendly, starting with some Karuk tribal members. A few shunned us and most just minded their own business.

But there were events and campaigns that brought people together. There were the first of the massive wildfires before everyone realized that fire was the new normal. There was the campaign to stop the use of herbicides in the forest. The Forest Service claimed it needed to spray to keep up the pace of logging but nobody, neither environmentalist nor logger, wanted their kids exposed to toxic chemicals.

And I began writing articles again for local papers, after what may be the longest hiatus from journalism in history. Among my favorites were the Two Rivers Tribune, published by the Hoopa Tribe, and the North Coast Journal. For a sampling, check <https://bit.ly/2krxckC>.

And I began to write this new book. It no longer seemed so pressing to keep the stories secret. History is written by the winners, they say. I've tried to write a history of the rest of us, as we lived it and watched it happening around us. I like that the young people around me — Native and white alike — are continuing the work that my generation began. That's certainly another book.

Chicken Asparagus Salad for One

Treat yourself — even with leftovers

By Simona Carini

tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

It's asparagus time. Years ago I planted asparagus crowns in the Berkeley community garden where I volunteered. There I learned the storage roots and rhizome of the 1-year-old Asparagus officinalis grown from seed are called crowns. I also learned that in the first year of establishment spears should not be harvested but allowed to grow into ferns. This helps the plant produce the carbohydrates necessary for the following year's growth, which can be harvested.

As a child in Italy, I waited impatiently for spring to come around so I could eat asparagus and strawberries. Decades later, I am still thrilled when I see the first green spears neatly bundled standing in orderly formation at grocery stores and farmers markets. I usually yield to the temptation and arrive back home with asparagus to cook the same day. If I need to store it, I do so in the crisper: I wrap their ends in a damp paper towel and place the bunch in an open plastic bag.

My mother boiled asparagus briefly and served them still warm, dressed with olive oil and lemon juice. I always roast them and since I am the only asparagus eater in the household, leftovers are the norm. The recipe I am sharing is the result of a happy combination of having not only roasted asparagus in the refrigerator but also leftover roast chicken, and not a lot of time to put dinner on the table for my hungry self.

For years I've followed a simple roast chicken recipe by Thomas Keller. I've always relished it when it comes out of the oven but not so much the day after. Given that we are a household of two, leftover roast chicken is a given, so creative reuse ideas are always welcome. This recipe is a great way of using leftover chicken and of showcasing asparagus, one of the season's most flavorful offerings. The avocado brings the two into harmony, as well. If you are vegetarian, you can substitute the chicken with a plant-based protein.

It's often easy to slide into not taking the time to prepare a nice meal when it is just us but everyone, whether part of a family or a family of one, deserves attention — that includes a nourishing, flavorful meal.

If you don't have leftover asparagus, roast some and let them cool before adding to the other salad ingredients.

Oven-roasted Asparagus

Ingredients:

1 bunch of asparagus
Extra-virgin olive oil
Fine sea salt, to taste
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Instructions:

Heat the oven to 400 F. Line a baking sheet with a silicone baking mat. Trim the woody ends from the asparagus as needed.

Place the asparagus on the mat and toss with enough olive oil to coat, a sprinkling of fine sea salt and a pinch of freshly ground black pepper. Spread in one layer.

Place in the oven and roast for 15 minutes or until tender to your liking. Remove from the oven and serve asparagus immediately. Store leftover asparagus in the refrigerator for use in the salad.

Roast Chicken and Asparagus Salad

This recipe serves one — double or triple up for company. Pumpkin seeds provide the crunch here but other seeds or nuts can swap in easily as toppings.

Ingredients:

4 ounces roast chicken, preferably pasture-raised
12 medium spears of roasted asparagus
Half of a small, ripe avocado
1 tablespoon mayonnaise, preferably homemade
Fine sea salt, to taste
1 tablespoon sprouted pumpkin seeds

Instructions:

Remove the chicken from the bone and dice. Cut the asparagus into 1-inch pieces.

On a serving plate or bowl, dice the avocado and mash it with a fork. Add the mayonnaise and blend it into the avocado.

Add the chicken and mix until combined, then add the asparagus and stir well. Taste and add a bit of sea salt, if needed. Sprinkle the pumpkin seeds on top and serve. ●

Project Muse: 'Duets' at Piante Gallery

By Gabrielle Gopinath
artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

“Duets,” opening this month at Piante Gallery, presents some memorable examples of the way words and pictures can brush against each other to strike sparks. For the show, gallery director Sue Natzger got in touch with 15 pairs of visual artists and writers who are either Humboldt-based or linked, proposing that they collaborate. Some artists and writers were strangers at the outset; others were linked by a longstanding friendship, like that of Becky Evans and Jerry Martien, and two others — Louis Marak and his son Jason Marak — by blood relations.

For Martien and Evans, thinking about this project led downstream on parallel paths. Martien is the author of books in poetry and prose that connect to place on multiple levels; Evans makes art of and about the land, using naturally sourced materials that have included sod, mud, beaver-gnawed sticks, surf balls and potato chips. The artists have certain things in common, like a Southern California childhood and a move to Humboldt County that turned out to be pivotal; they love the wild rivers of the region and remain fascinated by the way those cold, fast-moving streams have been exploited as conduits of power. Growing up, both experienced the state's geography as a riparian flow along U.S. Highway 101. Traffic's bidirectional flow doubled the flow of water, which was only pumped one-way.

The prose poem that Martien completed for this exhibition, “water and power,” sketches an episodic history of California rivers. It sweeps fluently from personal histories to larger ones, revealing how both are shaped in relation to prevailing currents. When read aloud, it unspools in long, racy left-justified lines that rise and fall like voices overheard in conversation, each paragraph/stanza initiating with the verb “flows,” to ekphrastic effect. If you look aslant, the stanza breaks resemble rapids; if you squint, a rainbow prism might focus the river's spume.

Marilyn Andrews, whose work often addresses the relation of text and image, is showing works on paper that layer handwritten text in different calligraphic hands, from Hebrew script to block capitals to an elegant copperplate cursive — palimpsest notations that tumble forth on the page the way thoughts will in the idle mind. Her reliefs juxtapose relics of analog-age manual labor like spindles, vises, bits of hardware and old tools, celebrating the bluntly Bauhaus principle of functional form while accentuating the considerable allure those solid objects now radiate in a de-skilled labor economy where interactions with computers have largely replaced ones with things.

Andrews' “Mezuzah” is both artwork and devotional object: a goatskin parchment scroll inscribed with a passage from the Book of Deuteronomy and furled in a bespoke case that hangs on the wall at a cant reprising a mezuzah's traditional angled placement on the doorpost of a Jewish household. A group of ceramic figurines titled “Muses” looks like glossy lengths of ceramic pipe, snow white, unarticulated forms like plumbing fixtures or straps of albino licorice, faceless like the bladefigures the early Minoans carved in marble.

While some pairs collaborated from beginning to end, Jason Marak wrote the short story on view in response to “Square Root of Tree,” a ceramic sculpture made in 2007 by his father, Louis Marak, professor emeritus of ceramics at Humboldt State University. “In doing this, I realized how certain elements of surrealism or magical realism that had been important in my own work had come from him,” Jason Marak observed. “Growing up with his work around me, certain things rubbed off: the juxtaposition of words in titles, the way the work prompts you to reconsider everyday objects or moments.”

Jason Marak writes mostly poetry and fiction. The piece he contributes here, like many of the ones he's been working on lately, takes the highly disciplined form of the 100-word short story. “These stories might start out much longer,” he explained, “but they get condensed.” The process can be quasi-culinary. “It's like cooking a sauce, or a roux: when you reduce it, the flavor gets stronger.” He says working with that restriction “has forced me to come to some (artistic) decisions I would never have arrived at otherwise.” Jason Marak's untitled story, typewritten on a piece of crumpled paper affixed to plywood, takes his father's koan-like title as a starting point and bends its implications in some surprising new directions.

“Duets” will be on view through June and July at Piante Gallery, 620 Second Street, Old Town Eureka. An opening reception will be held on Friday, June 7 in conjunction with Arts Alive. Readings by participating writers will take place on June 7 and July 12. Details available at www.piantegallery.com.

Editor's note: In the interest of full disclosure, Jason Marak is the spouse of Journal arts and features editor Jennifer Fumiko Cahill. Consequently, this piece was edited by assistant editor Kimberly Wear.

The Cat Would Like to Open a Dialogue

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

Let the healing begin. Shutterstock

Let me start by saying I am here to listen and this is a safe space. I want you to know that and feel comfortable. Maybe you could start by explaining exactly what your problem is. I hope it's cool if I keep one back leg extended straight up toward the ceiling while we talk.

I'm hearing that you're feeling "attacked" when your bare ankle has been slashed from under the bed and, well, I'm a little taken aback. It's never happened to me and I walk by there all the time. The parakeet hasn't mentioned anything like that and we spend a lot of time just staring at one another. I'm not saying I don't believe you, but there's got to be more to the story. Again, not that I'm saying you're making it up but did anyone else see it? Might it have been your perception? Could you have scraped against the ab machine I've never seen you take out from under the bed?

OK, looking at them in this light, your ankles do, in fact, bear a few fine, horizontal scars. I see that. Can you run through when you got each of them? Were they all from walking by the bed? And were you skittering in a mouse-like fashion in anticipation of something? I guess I'm asking what energy you're putting out there.

I mean, I'll admit to an occasional swipe in the spirit of frisky play and I'm sorry you took it as hostile and reacted by making that high-pitched sound and bleeding. I will own my part in that. I will own my friskiness. But just so you know, I have a human friend you don't know who is fine with it. And nobody else has ever brought it up as an issue before, including your stupid parakeet in its stupid cage on that weighted stand I can't knock over.

Not to minimize your legitimate feelings but I feel I should point out that cats have been living with humans for 10,000 years and it's been fine. But now you're complaining. It's not a negation of your position, I just think you need to read up on the history and get a little context.

And before you start casting blame, please keep in mind that I called for this dialogue. I'm hearing a lot about what I need to stop doing — stop slashing at your skin, stop biting your hands when they smell like chicken — but where is your responsibility? I'm looking to empower you here, not treat you like a victim.

For example, you could avoid the whole situation by leaping onto your bed from a couple of feet away. That's what I do. And the exercise would do you some good.

I just offered you a legit solution but you're not hearing me. And honestly, you're coming off a little angry. If you want love, you need to practice love. Listen to yourself and all that anger. Who's really being attacked here?

If you could let go of your anger for a second we could try to find common ground. But you need to compromise. You want to pass by ottomans, sofas and beds without your Achilles tendons being razored by unseen claws. I want the freedom to lie in wait and launch my forepaws at you in a swift arc of pain and potential infection. Can you not meet me halfway here?

You keep bringing up this stuff about me slashing your ankles, shredding the side of the couch, peeing in your slippers, trying to jump from the bookcase to knock the cage with your stupid bird, and it's just perpetuating the negativity. Maybe we should try not dwelling on all that stuff in the past and just try to go forward. I keep asking you what I can do to heal our relationship without changing my behavior in any way and you've given me nothing. I give up. There's no talking to you.

Our relationship means a lot to me. Ever since your ex left me here with you and your inane chirping bird, I've come to think of you as family. I want us to have a positive relationship and bridge our differences. And I feel like we're doing a lot of good work opening the lines of communication here. You just need to look beyond your own position and use a little empathy. Here, rub my belly.

OK, that was an involuntary reaction. You can't judge me for taking a swipe when you hesitate like that. Anybody would have sliced your hand open with it lurching and retreating like that. Apply a little pressure and it'll stop bleeding. Come on. You're being a baby. ●

Party Like There's Probably a Tomorrow

by Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

Memorial Day weekend has come and gone and with it the inauguration of the summer festival schedule begins. The 42nd installment of Summer Arts and Music Festival is happening in Benbow this weekend and, although I will likely not be there, I will be thinking about my erstwhile Southern Humboldt home and the charming people down there. Right around the bend are Enchanted Forest and Kate Wolf, and many more. What awaits us in the hot months between now and Hardly Strictly? Who is to say? Now that the grownups are meeting on their own on the Korean Peninsula without the human version of an aerosol-cheese factory fire to gum up the works of a potential peace deal, we might actually have decent Vegas odds of surviving the hot months of the year without a nuclear holocaust. So we must plan accordingly and pace ourselves. The hedonistic thrill of annihilation-eve must be supplanted with a sunblock-assisted, sober appreciation of the outdoor music season. Have fun, be safe and stay hydrated. And most of all, enjoy the show.

Have a great week.

Thursday

Portland's Man Repellant plays its first California date on tour tonight at the Outer Space at 7 p.m. ($5). With a smoked-out, low-fi grunge sound, it's difficult to believe that the band will live up to its name — which sounds like a well-used gadget on the tool belt of Adam West's iteration of Batman — and repel too many dudes. Sway Sisters and Dast Bunny share the stage.

Friday

There are a triad of free shows for you tonight for the first Friday of the first summer month. It's art night in Trinidad and the JD Jeffries Band will be playing at the Trinidad Art Gallery at 6 p.m. Harpist Howdy Emerson is also billed to play and with a name like Howdy, I assume they mean the mouth-harp or harmonica and not the stringed variety but I could be wrong. Wanna find out?

The Celtic sounds of Port Mooncall

will fill the warm wooden spaces of Café Mokka at 8 p.m. and give a soundtrack to the reflection of the waning Flower Moon playing on the pond outside.

And finally, the incomparable local pre-modern jazzy act Belles of the Levee will bring their delightful songbook to the Logger Bar at 9 p.m. to help keep the floorboards warm with dancing.

Saturday

Singer-songwriter John Elliott plays the Sanctuary tonight at 7:30 p.m. ($10-$25 sliding scale). The Minnesotan-turned-Californian is an independent wonder in an age of corporate music and has forged his own path through an industry that does not generally reward such mavericks. His dusty boots-styled tunes have been heard on television soundtracks and he is well appreciated by those who know good music. Find out why tonight.

Sunday

It's the second and last night of the Paul Simon Tribute show and tonight's performance will act as a fundraiser for the Arcata Playhouse, the host venue. It features a talented cadre of local musicians, including Duncan Burgess, Jan Bramlett and Joel Sonenshein, so expect a fun run through the songbook of America's most prolific tunesmith south of Bob Dylan 7 p.m. ($15).

Monday

Karaoke Mondays continue up at Six Rivers tonight at 8 p.m. with DJ Marv. Discover things about your own talents and those of your friends while belting out personal tributes to what we think our favorite songs should sound like. Want to avoid a serious rookie pitfall? Don't do "Whoomp! (There it is)" by Tag Team. There's a word in there that you really wouldn't expect from high school assembly memories and which most of us have absolutely no business saying. I have seen it happen and it isn't pretty.

Over at The Jam, the neo-soul funky

Meernaa plays the Outer Space on Tuesday, June 5 at 7 p.m.

hip hop dance party known as The Hip Connection goes down at 9 p.m. so don't hide your pretty selves away (price TBA). Get in on the action.

Tuesday

Bay Area producer Carly Bond fronts her own band out of Oakland called Meernaa. Staffed with some of the hottest jazz players in the area and featuring Ms. Bond's very soul-drenched vocals, this is a show worth seeing. Bond and Co. play the Outer Space tonight at 7 p.m. and for $5, the gig is a real steal. Local wonders Blood Honey and Dimboi will join the fun.

Wednesday

It's another installment of Mad River Brewery's Pints for Nonprofits, where a portion of the evening's suds goes for a good cause. This week the beneficiaries are the Osa Interactive Gardens NGO and One Forest, and the featured band is Arcata's own jazz-mutant hybrid Foxtrot so the tunes will be solid — 6 p.m. is the hour and free is the price, so who are you to resist? ●

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoastjournal.com.

Collin Yeo used to build Lego starships while listening to mid-70s Paul Simon records. Now he gardens nude to trap music. Lateral career move? He lives in Arcata.

North Coast Open Studios/Thao Le Khac

North Coast Open Studios, now in its 20th year, celebrates Humboldt County's vibrant art scene with more than 100 artists opening their spaces to the public. Chat with the artists, see what inspires them, find your own inspiration and take home original art over two weekends: June 2-3 and June 9-10 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Catch the Art Night Friday preview June 1 from 6 to 9 p.m. (free). www.northcoastopenstudios.com.

Cruise ship in town last week and Martinis by the Bay this week? Aren't we posh, Eureka? See what's shaking (and stirred) when 12 of the area's premier mixologists pour 18 of their signature cocktails for a good cause June 7 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Wharf-inger Building ($40/quintet of tastes). Appetizers, Cuban music and a cigar pavilion kick things up a notch.

Adriana Nikolova

More art, culture and great food all in one spot happens this weekend at the International Celebration on Sunday, June 3 from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart Parish (Free entry, $1 food tickets available). Try authentic Armenian, Filipino, Italian and Mexican options, plus good ol' American favorites like burgers, hotdogs and pulled-pork sandwiches. The event also has multicultural dance performances, silent auction, dessert booth and a no-host bar.

Ride Your Pony

Looking for small-town fun where you can eat, drink and brush flanneled elbows with friends all in the comfort of your favorite pair of jeans? Head to McKinleyville this week/weekend for the "tail" end of the 50th annual Pony Express Days. The event, which has already seen a Kick-Off Mixer and outdoor Chili Cook-off earlier this week, gears up for the mane event on Saturday, when a horse-friendly parade clip clops down Central Avenue and a festival at Pierson Park gets underway. But before that, there are a few fun events saddled up and raring to go. Thursday, May 31, catch the Fireman's Muster in the upper parking lot at Pierson Park at 6 p.m. (free). Watch local firefighters perform a bucket brigade and hose relay. Then polish your boots and get ready to go scootin' at the Pony Express Days Dance on Friday, June 1 from 8 p.m. to midnight at Azalea Hall, featuring live music by Lone Star Junction ($10).

On Saturday, June 2, take your family to Azalea Hall from 8 to 10:30 a.m. for good eatin' at the Pancake Breakfast ($7, $3). Once fortified, you're all set for a full day of festivities. The parade marches down Central Avenue starting at Murray Road at 11 a.m. and ends at School Road (free). Then from noon to 4 p.m., the festival at Pierson Park is your destination for fun with live music by TAXI, vendors of all types, food, beverages, fire station open house, the Pony Express Saloon, a kids corner and horseshoe tournament (free entry).

Fun in the Sun

June is bustin' out all over and nowhere as much as Southern Humboldt this weekend. The first weekend in June means it's time for the Summer Arts & Music Festival — a two-day celebration on the banks of the beautiful Eel River at the Benbow Lake State Recreation Area that's saturated with music, dance and art. The event has brought good vibes and great memories to people for 42 years and is a major fundraiser for the Mateel Community Center, which could use a lot of love right now. The festival falls on Saturday and Sunday, June 2-3, with gates opening at 10 a.m. each day and going until 10 p.m. ($40 at the gate for both days, $25 single day tickets, kids 12 and under are free).

Musical headliners this year include eight-piece funk/soul group ORGONE and Nkulee Dube, the daughter of the late South African reggae superstar Lucky Dube. Four stages will showcase 70 musical acts, dance troupes, DJs and kids' entertainment, including Captain Bubbles and Wizards of Play/Circus Nature. Attendees can check out the wares, info and goods at 150 handmade craft, food and nonprofit booths. There's the Lunar Stage, with a new Basscraft sound system helping DJs spread tunes of all genres out to the crowd and the Lawn and Trees stages, hosting some of the best regional and local bands, like Rose's Pawn Shop, Cold Blue Water, Object Heavy, Jammies by 9, Latin Peppers and Soul Majestic. More attractions can be found at the Belly Dance Temple and Generation Green Dome. Too many great vendors, artists and musicians to pack into this space here. For a complete schedule of events/performers, see the special insert in the May 10 Journal or visit www.mateel.org.

When Han Met Chewie

Why Solo doesn't need to save the galaxy

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

filmLand@northcoastjournal.com

Reviews

SOLO: A STAR WARS STORY. Every addition to the Star Wars canon has shouldered massive expectations in terms of earnings and the continuation of a mythic narrative that more than one generation feels ownership of. A single stroke of casting, a line of dialogue, might ruin fanboy childhoods, serve up resistance metaphors for our real-world struggles or make belated strides in inclusive casting. Each movie has to succeed as a story while offering the right kinds of heroes and villains for the kids who'll sweep up its toys. I say this not as a cynical observer but as a person with action figures of the Tico sisters at the foot of her computer monitor.

But what's at stake with Solo beyond building toward late-'70s Harrison Ford's space scoundrel and staying grounded in the look and feel of the Star Wars oeuvre? Expectations dropped lower with all the scuttlebutt over Ron Howard taking over the helm and reshooting much of Phil Lord and Christopher Miller's work on the spinoff. And real talk: We came to see young Lando and the Wookiee. And the Falcon straight off the lot. All of which Solo delivers with nods to the future we've already seen and a tour of Lando's cape collection. Unlike its predecessors, Solo enjoys its youthful lack of responsibility and so do we. It's predictable in places, corny in others and therefore not so different from the original Star Wars, with its cast of wobbly newbies and veterans. We know from the outset the characters we've invested in are all going to make it — looking at you, Rogue One — and yet the action sequences are so deftly shot and edited that it's still exciting.

Young Han (Alden Ehrenreich) cons and hustles his way through the alleys of grimy industrial planet Corellia. He and his girl Qi'ra (Emilia Clarke) attempt to escape their servitude to a crime boss but only Han makes it out, signing up for a tour with the Empire in the hope of becoming a pilot and returning to rescue her. His stint in Imperial uniform is muddier than planned and he deserts — along with his new pal Chewbacca (Joonas Suotama) — by joining up with a trio of bandits comprised of Beckett (Woody Harrelson, who's lately leaning into the role of survivalist sci-fi mentor), the no-nonsense

Val (Thandie Newton) and Rio (an overly folksy Jon Favreau). Together they attempt to boost a massive shipment of fuel in a Star Wars version of a classic moving train robbery but fail at great cost. To make up for the payload meant for murderously mood-swinging Crimson Dawn gangster Dryden Vos (Paul Bettany), the crew must take on another heist, assisted by Vos' right-hand woman — surprise! — Qi'ra, who no longer seems to require rescuing. They'll need a fast ship (wink, wink), which takes us to a seedy card game to meet dapper smuggler Lando Calrissian (Donald Glover), owner of the still unscathed Millennium Falcon and L3-37 (Phoebe Waller-Bridge), a droid wired for revolution and quick barbs. Team assembled and ride secured, we're off for mining colonies, fuel theft and the temptation to choose people over profit.

Ehrenreich's Han sports his lopsided grin with a wavering confidence that feels appropriate as he echoes Ford's gestures and tics. He's best in comic moments (anyone who's had to use their junior high French/Spanish skills will relate to his first conversation with Chewbacca) but thankfully he isn't tasked with carrying the whole picture. The romantic plotline is weak but it's not like we're Team Qi'ra anyway. After all, how could Clarke win us over completely with Princess/General Organa just beyond the horizon? Glover's channeling of Billy D. Williams is smooth as his side part — one gets the feeling he may have spent time as an adolescent working on Lando's brow arch and is finally getting the chance to put it to use — and he adds humor, playing up his Cloud City-player vanity. Woody Harrelson brings his usual charisma and what I can only assume was intense preparation involving putting on a duster, getting super high and binge-watching Firefly.

There are musical cues to ensure we don't miss iconic moments, like Han and Chewie flying the Falcon together for the first time, and callbacks (or calls forward, really) for the casual viewer and the devotee alike, and the movie holds the line on the franchise's recent improvements. The action and special effects are the top-tier stuff we've come to take for granted along with orchestral scores and more diverse casting. Looking at how seamlessly people of color and people with different bodies fit into this galaxy makes one wonder at the overwhelming whiteness mainstream filmmakers once settled for — that anyone would have hesitated to cast a black woman with natural hair alongside a guy with four arms is nuts. By now we expect a Star Wars cast to look like us, the audience (though reports of a pansexual Lando turn out to be exaggerated), and for female heroes (human or otherwise) to drive the action. And since Disney is intent on cranking out a steady stream of these sequels and prequels, maybe we can relax our expectations that they all be landmarks and enjoy what they offer: a little adventure, a few laughs and an occasion to try the Wookiee roar. PG13. 135M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

When you're just too damn fly to be the wingman.

Solo: A Star Wars Story

Previews

ACTION POINT. Johnny Knoxville endures and inflicts catapult launches, collisions and junk punches as the founder of a horrendously unsafe amusement park in a Jackass-esque comedy. R. 85M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

ADRIFT. A couple (Shailene Woodley, Sam Claflin) sailing across the ocean get caught in a massive hurricane and I don't think fitting on a door together is going to save them. PG13. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THE PRINCESS BRIDE (1987). Have fun storming the castle. PG. 98M. BROADWAY.

Continuing

AVENGERS: INFINITY WAR. Seriousness suffocates the best of this parade of characters in this massive supermovie. PG13. 149M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

BOOK CLUB. Candice Bergen, Jane Fonda, Diane Keaton and Mary Steenburgen are consummate pros in a light, all-too-rare comedy about dating later in life. PG13. 97M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

DEADPOOL 2. Ryan Reynolds in his destined role with a better story, action and jokes. It's almost fun, kind and rough enough to make you forget it's spawn of the Marvel juggernaut. R. 113M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK, MINOR.

THE GUARDIANS. French film about women working a family farm while the men fight in the Great War. Starring Nathalie Baye, Laura Smet and Iris Bry. MINOR.

LIFE OF THE PARTY. Melissa McCarthy plays a middle-aged mom going back to college with her daughter in this funny movie that's still too conventional for her talents. PG13. 105M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

OVERBOARD. Anna Faris and Eugenio Derbez in a gender-swapped 1980s comedy remake about revenge-conning a wealthy jackass into fake marriage. PG13. 112M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA.

A QUIET PLACE. This effective horror about a family surviving amid creatures that hunt by sound achieves emotional authenticity about trauma and isolation. BROADWAY.

RBG. Documentary about Ruth Bader Ginsburg, the Supreme Court justice in the fly collar. PG. 97M. MINIPLEX.

REVENGE. A woman (Matilda Anna Ingrid Lutz) turns the tables on her rapey would-be murderers in a bloody exploitation action horror movie. R. 108M. MINOR.

SHOW DOGS. Ludacris voices a police Rottweiler undercover at a dog show. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352
I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2018 by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2017-18, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2017-18 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be sold subsequently at a tax sale to satisfy the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2018, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2018

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707)476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 21st, 2018. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 24th, May 31st and June 7th, 2018.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362
Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2018, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2018, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorders office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed or trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 844-477-7869, or visit this internet Web site www.stoxposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case T.S.# 82620. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the

Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. CALI-FORNIA TD SPECIALISTS Attn: Teri Snyder 8190 East Kaiser Blvd. Anaheim Hills, CA 92808

MICHAEL DALE LANDING
CASE NO. PR180114

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of MICHAEL D LANDING, aka MICHAEL DALE LANDING A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner MATHEW LANDING In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that MATHEW LANDING be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 14, 2018 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 6. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Carol Ann Harrison

December 10, 1955 – May 17, 2018

Carol A. Harrison died at her Fieldbrook home on Thursday, May 17, 2018 with her wife, Pam, by her side after a 3-month battle with ovarian cancer. She was 62 and a 30-year resident of Humboldt County.

Carol was born Dec. 10, 1955 in Sacramento to Jim and Caroline Harrison who recognized early that their energetic girl had a gift for learning, talking and sports. Parks and recreation leagues lead to a successful high school career playing volleyball, basketball and softball.

After graduating from Encina High School in Sacramento as class valedictorian, Carol attended UC Davis, majoring in Political Science while playing intercollegiate volleyball and basketball. It was there that Carol met Pam, and they began their 42-year journey together. In her senior year, Carol became the first female in 56 years to be awarded the coveted W.P. Lindley award given to the outstanding student in athletics, scholarship and student service. Carol received her Masters in Journalism at UC Berkeley.

Carol spent her early working years writing for the Leshner Communications Inc., as a sport writer and sports editor for the Valley Pioneer, and sports writer for the Valley Times. In addition, she produced the North Coast Section basketball programs and began her 25-year career of coaching women's basketball as an assistant coach at Cal State Hayward. Her next stop was UC Berkeley where she coached to JV team for several years and then accepted a full-time position as an assistant for the varsity squad where she ultimately was named senior assistant. After eight years as a Pac-10 assistant, Carol followed Pam to Humboldt State University to be her assistant and eventually succeeded Pam as head coach. Carol helped rebuild a program that ultimately won its first ever women's basketball league championship (1994) and competed in the regional finals. She developed All-Conference post players 12 of 14 years at Humboldt State and three consecutive Conference Freshman Players of the Year.

At 48, she successfully coordinated an election campaign to pass a local school bond measure and returned to journalism, becoming the health, education and travel section editor for The Eureka Reporter. After the newspaper folded, Harrison split her time between freelance journalism, college teaching, and marketing/public relations consultation for a variety of local nonprofits. She became part-time program director for the Project for Senior Action.

Carol loved college football season and her Cal Bears in particular. Besides the college football season, in Carol's mind the best sport viewing was the men's and women's college basketball "Road to the Final 4," and the Masters. An avid golfer who could hit the ball a country mile, her only regret is she did not play enough golf. But the time she was not golfing was spent designing, planting, hauling materials, watering plants and loving her garden. It's her pride and joy since leaving coaching.

Carol's other loves were adventures associated with travel — museums, learning about new cultures, wine and wildlife — that led to numerous National Parks and foreign countries. Her trip of a lifetime was to Antarctica where she fell in love with Penguins. As any good journalist would do, she captured these memories in Shutterfly books that she designed and wrote.

Carol is preceded in her death by her parents Jim and Caroline Harrison, and uncles, Charles Sweet and Hal Fraser.

Carol is survived by her wife, Pam Martin; her two sisters, Karen Clevenger and her husband Gene; and Tracy Harrison. She is also survived by her niece, Kristi, and her husband, Roy Gage; niece, Samantha Clevenger; nephew, Tim Clevenger; three great nieces, Kailee, Reese, and Addison Gage; and aunts, Dorothy Schumacher Fraser and Margaret Harrison Sweet; cousins, Janet Caldwell, Barry Fraser, Chip Sweet and Steve Sweet; and goddaughter, Taylor Gleave.

She is also survived by her father- and mother-in-law, George and Patty Martin; brother- and sister-in-law, Steve and Katherine Martin; niece, Kirstyn Martin; nephew, Kyle Martin. And Carol's three cats: Obie, Cider and Leo.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to the "Carol Ann Harrison Memorial Scholarship Fund" at the Humboldt Area Foundation.

Carol's Celebration of Life will be held at Fieldbrook Winery on Saturday, June 16, 2018 from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Colorado Brown Stain and Fluoridation

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

It reads like the sort of detective yarn beloved by BBC viewers, except that instead of the one-hour format, this story took nearly 50 years to unravel. Chapter one began in 1901, when young East Coast dental school graduate Frederick McKay moved to Colorado Springs, Colorado, and was shocked by the prevalence of what became known as Colorado Brown Stain disorder: grotesque stains on the teeth of 90 percent of children born there. Trying to figure out what was causing the problem, he enlisted the aid of G.V. Black, a noted dental researcher. The pair soon noted the teeth of people who had moved there as adults were unaffected and stained teeth were exceptionally resistant to decay. Chapter two saw McKay and others narrowing the cause down to water supplies. In particular, when (on McKay's advice) the town of Oakley, Idaho, changed its supply from one spring to another, the mottling on new teeth of children disappeared. Fast forward to chemists at the Alcoa Corporation testing water samples using advanced photospectrographic analyses. They found high levels of the element fluorine in water from those communities which reported mottling in their children's teeth. Our final chapter has Trendley Dean, director of the dental hygiene unit at the National Institute of Health, as its protagonist. Starting in 1931, Dean established that at levels of up to 1 part per million in drinking water, fluoride (a fluorine compound, usually sodium fluoride) didn't cause mottling but helped prevent decay by slowing the demineralization of tooth enamel. It also promoted remineralization of the enamel. In 1944, he persuaded the City Commission of Grand Rapids, Michigan, to add fluoride to its public water supply.

dropped more than 60 percent. And thus was brought into existence what's been called the single most effective public health measure to inhibit tooth decay. Today, the World Health Organization endorses fluoridation of water supplies that lack adequate fluoride levels, while the U.S. Centers for Disease Control lists it as one of the 10 greatest health achievements of the 20th century. Two months ago, Public Health England issued an in-depth report that concluded that 5 year olds in fluoridated areas were much less likely to experience tooth decay than in non-fluoridated areas. Importantly, children from relatively non-affluent areas benefited the most. This is relevant to the situation in the U.S. since — unlike most European countries, where a filling typically costs under $100 (in Hungary, it's about $10!) — dentist visits are expensive and we don't teach dental care in schools, so water fluoridation is often the prime source of fluoride for kids. Like vaccinating and fortifying milk with vitamin D, adding fluoride to water supplies to prevent dental decay is controversial in the U.S., pitting "common good" against "individual rights." During the Cold War, conspiracy theorists even saw fluoridation as a communist plot designed to undermine the health of Americans. More recently, it has been claimed to cause, among other conditions, Down's syndrome, kidney stones and bladder cancer. None of these claims has stood up to scrutiny. If you live in Arcata or Eureka, your city tap water contains 0.4 to 0.7 parts per million of fluoride. Your kids' teeth thank you. ● Barry Evans (barryevans9@yahoo.com) has just waded through a small library of pro- and con-fluoridation documents. Until more evidence is presented to the contrary, he's firmly on the pro side.

Free Will Astrology

Week of May 31, 2018

By Rob Breznsky

freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The Aries poet Anna Kamie?ska described the process of writing as akin to “the backbreaking work of hacking a footpath, as in a coal mine; in total darkness, beneath the earth.” Whether or not you’re a writer, I’m guessing that your life might have felt like that recently. Your progress has been slow and the mood has been dense and the light has been dim. That’s the tough news. The good news is that I suspect you will soon be blessed with flashes of illumination and a semi-divine intervention or two. After that, your work will proceed with more ease. The mood will be softer and brighter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do you know what you are worth? Have you compiled a realistic assessment of your talents, powers and capacities? Not what your friends and enemies think you’re worth, nor the authority figures you deal with, nor the bad listeners who act like they’ve figured out the game of life. When I ask you if you have an objective understanding of your real value, Taurus, I’m not referring to what your illusions or fears or wishes might tell you. I’m talking about an honest, accurate appraisal of the gifts you have to offer the world. If you do indeed possess this insight, hallelujah and congratulations! If you don’t, the coming weeks will be an excellent time to work on getting it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Now is a favorable time to worship at the shrine of your own intuition. It’s a ripe moment to boost your faith in your intuition’s wild and holy powers. To an extraordinary degree, you can harness this alternate mode of intelligence to gather insights that are beyond the power of your rational mind to access by itself. So be bold about calling on your gut wisdom, Gemini. Use it to track down the tricky, elusive truths that have previously been unavailable to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): “A poem is never finished; it is only abandoned,” wrote poet W. H. Auden, paraphrasing poet Paul Valéry. I think the same can be said about many other kinds of work. We may wish we could continue tinkering and refining forever so as to bring a beloved project to a state of absolute perfection. But what’s more likely is that it will always fall at least a bit short of that ideal. It will never be totally polished and complete to our satisfaction. And we’ve got to accept that. I suggest you meditate on these ideas in the coming weeks, Cancerian. Paradoxically, they may help you be content with how you finish up the current phase of your beloved project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): I highly recommend that you spend the next three weeks hanging out on a beach every day, dividing your time between playing games with friends, sipping cool drinks, reading books you’ve always wanted to read, and floating dreamily in warm water. To indulge in this relaxing extravaganza would be in maximum alignment with the current cosmic rhythms. If you can’t manage such a luxurious break from routine, please at least give yourself the gift of some other form of recreation that will renew and refresh you all the way down to the core of your destiny.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contemporaries of the ancient Greek philosopher Pythagoras told colorful stories about the man. Some believed he was the son of a god and that one of his thighs was made of gold. When he crossed the Casas River, numerous witnesses testified that the river called out his name and welcomed him. Once a snake bit him, but he suffered no injury, and killed the snake by biting it in return. On another occasion, Pythagoras supposedly coaxed a dangerous bear to stop committing violent acts. These are the kinds of legends I expect you to spread about yourself in the coming days, Virgo. It’s time to boost your reputation to a higher level.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): My counsel may seem extreme, but I really think you should avoid mildness and meekness and modesty. For the immediate future, you have a mandate to roar and cavort and exult. It’s your sacred duty to be daring and experimental and exploratory. The cosmos and I want to enjoy the show as you act like you have the right to express your soul’s code with brazen confidence and unabashed freedom. The cosmos and I want to squeal with joy as you reveal raw truths in the most emotionally intelligent ways possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): French novelist Honoré de Balzac periodically endured intense outbreaks of creativity. “Sometimes it seems that my brain is on fire,” he testified after a twenty-six-day spell when he never left his writing room. I’m not predicting anything quite as manic as that for you, Scorpio. But I do suspect you will soon be blessed (and maybe a tiny bit cursed) by a prolonged bout of fervent inspiration. To ensure that you make the best use of this challenging gift, get clear about how you want it to work for you. Don’t let it boss you. Be its boss.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ancient civilizations waged war constantly. From Mesopotamia to China to Africa, groups of people rarely went very long without fighting other groups of people. There was one exception: the Harappan culture that thrived for about 2,000 years in the Indus River Valley, which in the present day stretches through Afghanistan, Pakistan and India. Archaeologists have found little evidence of warfare there. Signs of mass destruction and heavy armaments are non-existent. Art from that era and area does not depict military conflict. One conclusion we might be tempted to draw from this data is that human beings are not inherently combative and violent. In any case, I want to use the Harappan civilization’s extended time of peace as a metaphor for your life in the next eight weeks. I believe (and hope!) you’re entering into a phase of very low conflict.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Every human being I’ve ever known, me included, has to wage a continuous struggle between these pairs of opposites: 1. bad habits that waste their vitality and good habits that harness their vitality; 2. demoralizing addictions that keep them enslaved to the past and invigorating addictions that inspire them to create their best possible future. How’s your own struggle going? I suspect you’re in the midst of a turning point. Here’s a tip that could prove useful: Feeding the good habits and invigorating addictions may cause the bad habits and demoralizing addictions to lose some of their power over you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): “Some books seem like a key to unfamiliar rooms in one’s own castle,” said author Franz Kafka. I suspect this idea will be especially relevant to you in the coming weeks, Aquarius. And more than that: In addition to books, other influences may also serve as keys to unfamiliar rooms in your inner castle. Certain people, for instance, may do and say things that give you access to secrets you’ve been keeping from yourself. A new song or natural wonderland may open doors to understandings that will transform your relationship with yourself. To prep you for these epiphanies, I’ll ask you to imagine having a dream at night in which you’re wandering through a house you know very well. But this time, you discover there’s a whole new wing of the place that you never knew existed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Just for now, let’s say it’s fine to fuel yourself with comfort food and sweet diversions. Let’s proceed on the hypothesis that the guardians of your future want you to treat yourself like a beloved animal who needs extra love and attention. So go right ahead and spend a whole day (or two) in bed reading and ruminating and listening to soul-beguiling music. Take a tour through your favorite memories. Move extra slowly. Do whatever makes you feel most stable and secure. Imagine you’re like a battery in the process of getting recharged. ●

WORLD PREMIERE JUNE 14-JULY 1 RUZZANTE COMES HOME FROM THE WAR

The Dell'Arte Company
Directed by Michael Fields
Thursday-Sunday (no performance 6/21)
8pm, Rooney Amphitheatre

The war is over. Three soldiers return home after years of fighting to find that their home has completely changed; no one really knows them anymore and they don't know themselves outside of being soldiers. The Dell'Arte Company presents a no-holds-barred Commedia dell'Arte performance that hits at the humor and the humanity of coming home from war.

$18 Regular
$15 Senior/Student
$12 Kids
Sundays 6/17 & 6/24
FREE ADMITTANCE TO
